

Nice

On my journey to Nice, I could either have a manic journey and get a train from Hertford East Station to Liverpool

Street and then from Liverpool Street via King's Cross and St Pancras to Folkestone.

From there, I would get the Eurotunnel over to Calais. From Calais, I would get a connecting train from Paris, then I finally reach my location in Nice. Or I could take the quicker and easier route by travelling by car to Stansted Airport, parking in the short stay car park, then taking a flight to Nice.

I would stay in a beautiful hotel, like, Radisson Blu Hotel. I would stay here because it set on its own private beach and the swimming pool is on the roof top terrace with breath taking views of the Mediterranean Sea.

If I were to go to Nice, I could dine in the Radisson Blu Hotel, which has various restaurants that promise you a fantastic, gastronomic experience. I could also go along the Promenade des Anglais and try out the lovely restaurants and cafes for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Some traditional dishes I could try are, Pan Bagnat, Salade Niçoise and Ratatouille.

What would I do in Nice?

Discover the Old Town of Nice (le Vieux Nice), which has colourful facades and typically Mediterranean shutters. I could visit the Cours Saleya, the famous market and flower market and the cities best ice cream shops.

Parc de la Colline du Château, this translates as castle hill, there was once a medieval castle here that was destroyed by Louis XIV in 1706. The hill still stands and at 93 metres above sea level, it offers glorious, panoramic views over the city. There is a waterfall, park and picnic area.

The Musée Matisse is a museum devoted to the artwork of Henri Matisse. It has one of the World's largest collections of his work from his artistic beginnings to his last works.

The forecast is sunny and includes lows of 21 and highs of 26 degrees centigrade with a gentle breeze, therefore, packing, high factor sun cream, a sunhat and a sun parasol would be necessary.

My typical souvenir from Nice would be colourful ceramics, such as, cups, bowls and plates which can be bought from the Old Town and at the market of Cours Saleya.
