

My Technology Bingo Challenge

Day 1 - Designing a ball game

My family and I have recently rescued a lovely dog called Betty who loves playing with balls so I thought I would base this game around her so that I could be doing my work while playing with her. Betty is very good at catching balls and would be a very good goalie so I decided that that's what the game would be. There are three goals dotted around the garden and they each are worth different amounts (five, ten and fifteen) of points, the furthest being the most valuable. The aim of the game is to throw the ball into the goals without Betty catching it. The first person to gain 50 points is the winner. I ended up coming last with only 25 points, my Mum came in second with 35 points and my stepdad came first with 50.

Day 2 - Drawing an electronic household item in black biro

This is my mum's Dyson Hoover which I drew in my black bic pen. I first of all drew a rough outline in pencil and then went over in black biro.

Day 3 - Making a map of my local area in the style of Harry Beck

I used google maps to have a good idea of what my local area looks like on a normal map and then I drew it onto a piece of A4 paper in the style of Harry Beck, using different coloured pencils.

Day 4 - Making an album cover which defines me and my personality

This album design defines me and my personality because it is very fun and colourful and it's also a bit crazy, all of which define me quite well. It has the letter Y in the middle as it's the first letter of my name and I thought that the black would rather cool with the colourful backdrop.

Day 5 - Using a toilet roll to make a useful household item
