

A New Olympic Sport:

Blue ball

This game involves two players who hit a blue ball with a racket. The aim of the game is to beat the other player by hitting the wall with the ball above the blue line and then making the ball bounce once on the floor before they can hit the ball again.

The Rules for Blue Ball:

The game is played to 14 points. The winning player must win by two points. Matches are won by the first player to win three games (best of five games). A player can earn a point when they hit the wall with the ball above the blue line. If they hit below the blue line they lose a point. If a player gets in the way of the other who is trying to get the ball, that player can ask the referee for a penalty shot which means the player gets to hit the ball whilst the other player has to stand at the side for the shot. There are travel lines on either side of the court and wall, if you hit it in the travel lines then it will be out, if you hit the ball whilst in the travel lines you will lose a point.
